

Alston, William. "Varieties of Privileged Access." American Philosophical Quarterly 8, no. 3. (1971): 223-241. Alston argues that phenomenal privileged access suggests the possibility of non-inferential knowledge, or knowledge that is not based on reasoning from other beliefs or evidence. This helps articulate a solid argument in favor of properly basic beliefs.

Howard-Snyder, Daniel. "Lehrer's Case Against Foundationalism." Erkenntnis 60, no. 1. (2004): 51-73. Howard-Snyder responds to Lehrer's critique of Foundationalism and then presents a sophisticated version that avoids the charges of infinite regress. This article will help me better articulate a more robust defense of properly basic beliefs.

Plantinga, Alvin. "Reason and Belief in God." In Faith and Rationality: Reason and Belief in God, ed. Alvin Plantinga and Nicholas Wolterstorff, 16-93. Notre Dame, IN: University of Notre Dame Press, 1983. Plantinga contends that belief in God can be properly basic in the sense that it is a belief that is directly experienced and not dependent on other beliefs or evidence. This will help as a sort of case study in my evaluation of Properly Basic Beliefs.
